We are extremely glad to be associated with 'The Institute of Liver and Biliary Sciences', New Delhi, in the form of e-learning -'The ILBS'ECHO Course'. The activity is a blend of information, education and thorough canvass in the field of Hepatology. Ours being a tertiary care institute, is involved deeply in medical education. ILBS has provided a platform for the post-graduate students to interact with different faculties in the field. About 18 resident doctors and 6 faculty members have registered for the course. We have presented and discussed in depth, two cases of liver disorders over these days. We are now going across mid-way and discovered rising interest in hepatology amongst our students. Our institute runs a gastroentero-hepatology clinic on every Monday. We see about 2000 patients of alimentary disorder a year. Over last six months, about 390 patients of liver disorder have been managed in the speciality OPD. It has helped in the practical management of liver disorders in day-to-day practice. We would be pleased to continue this expedition towards a treasure of knowledge. We would also like to recommend this program to other medical colleges in India. Whilst many advances and improvisations occur, the program brings in a lot of expectation and enthusiasm. Here's wishing you all the best!
